Healing Through the Displacement of the Play in Child Analysis

featuring Rick Hall, Ph.D.

Description:

The case of 8 year-old Peter will be presented to illustrate how an equivalent of parental loss through disability contributed to Peter's depression, anxiety and narcissistic defenses. Illustrations will be given to show how vulnerable to narcissistic injury Peter was and how the resulting narcissistic defenses interfered with his education.

Case material will be provided to show how Peter used the displacement of play with Lego blocks and Lego mini-figures to express how much of a bad guy he thought he was. His multiple transferences to his analyst were also expressed in the displacement of the Lego play. He thought he was the worst of bad guys. Before treatment, he seemed to be on the way to living down to that image of himself.
